

Random Impressions In Current Exhibitions

shortly to be published in English. Mr. E. Asplund is the compiler. The work will be in two small folio volumes, it will contain photographs of all the etchings, and the edition will be limited. E. Weyhe, the book seller, is the American agent.

There are plenty of prints to be seen just now. The Keppel gallery is filled with early engravings, works by Mantegna, Schongauer, Durer, Rembrandt, and so on. At the Knoedler gallery there is a collection of Whistlers. The Kraushaar gallery shows prints by M. A. J. Bauer and W. Witsen. The Kennedy gallery exhibits etchings by Louis Orr.

The thirty-first annual exhibition of the New York Water Color Club is announced to be held at the Fine Arts Building. It will open on January 14 and will last until early in February.

The old masters at the Ehrich gallery this month are minor men of the eighteenth century, minor, but accomplished. It is delightful to see the "Portrait of Mrs. Garrick," by Zoffany, on whose interesting qualities we had occasion to dwell at some length in this place last spring. It is not a very weighty example of him, but it is a good one. There is a charming theatrical portrait—"Mrs. Fitchard"—in the collection, an excellent illustration of the suave art of Francis Cotes. Portraits by Nathaniel Hone and Allan Ramsay should also be cited. There are only two subject pictures, but those make a capital pair of pastorals. They are from the graceful hand of Francis Wheatley.

A number of water colors by Childe Hassam go on the walls at the Milch gallery to-morrow. They are to be followed on December 1 by the annual holiday show of paintings of limited size, and a special exhibition of etchings, some of them in color, by William Meyerowitz. At the Ferargil gallery there are recent paintings by George Inness Jr.

Mr. Willard L. Metcalf and Mr. Frank W. Benson show some paintings at the Macbeth gallery. Among the half dozen by the former artist there is one very beautiful canvas, "The Silver Trail," a moonlit marine. The sea is level and there is no shipping. This is a study merely of light and color. It is dated 1910 but it is as fresh in its romantic appeal and its truth to nature as though it had been painted yesterday. Mr. Metcalf's other exhibits are his usual vivid impressions of field, brook and meadow, with some of his usual charming arrangements of autumnal tints. But the sea piece pretty nearly shrivels them all up. Mr. Benson, curiously, has much the same experience. All of his ten paintings have a certain merit. His open air studies possess vitality. In his figure subjects he realizes his gracious presence with a skillful, accurate touch. But somehow in only one of these, the handsome "Elizabeth," does his work take on positive substance, a beauty with true nervous force in it. Most of his portraits this time come perilously near to being thin and papery. He is exhilarating, though, in his study of wild duck, flying Merganser.

Mrs. Annetta Saint-Gaudens is showing a group of her sculptures at the Civic Club. It includes some symbolic compositions.

At the Anderson Galleries there will be placed on exhibition on November 22, to be sold on the 26th, a number of paintings collected by the late Walter Kerr and others. George Inness, R. A. Blakelock, F. S. Church, Wyatt Eaton and A. H. Wyant are among the Americans represented. There are pictures of the modern Continental schools and there are a few old masters.

The little show of only fifteen pictures with which the Folsom gallery has opened at its new location is one of the best which the season has thus far brought forward. We have alluded in another place to the not very satisfactory picture by Mr. Jonas Lie shown at the New Society. The Folsoms have obtained in his "Eastward" a positively joyous example of his robust art. There are good things by William Carrigan, Chas. W. Hawthorne, Childe Hassam and others. Mr. Ivan Olinsky surpasses himself in his "Morning." The gallery is all alive with talent. A first rate exhibition.

Hand-wrought jewelry set with precious and semi-precious stones is on exhibition at the Little gallery. The principal attraction of this kind of work is individuality, combined, of course, with good workmanship. The pieces on view at the Little Gallery should afford seekers after the peculiar ornament that just expresses some phase of their own personalities a chance to indulge their desires. A conventionalized peacock of opals, pearls and olivines on a chain is the work of Lucretia Bush. Two crosses of quaint design were made by Josephine Hartwell Shaw, and another cross, set in moonstones and onyx, is the work of Margaret Rogers. Edward E. Oakes and Reginald Pearce have a number of attractive pieces in the collection.

At the Touchstone gallery paintings by Milton Mayer are on exhibition. The most striking of these are "The Poet's Retreat," "Fantasy" and "Poetry." In "Fantasy" the artist is most unrestrained in expressing himself. The picture impresses one simply as a shower of color, the effect being produced by flakes of pink, white and red. These are presumably leaves or blossoms of some kind falling from one long, graceful branch of a tree the like of which never bore blossoms. "The Poet's Retreat" reveals a little hut dimly seen through a similar shower of color spots. And in "Poetry" the same device is used to veil some rather poorly drawn trees. Mr. Milton Mayer has distinct feeling for color and almost no perception of line.

$7.95 to $15 Blouses

A Clearance Sale At $5

BLouses, most essential feature of the well-dressed woman's wardrobe, have never received such concentrated attention on the part of designer and maker to make them irresistible in styles and trimmings, and this re-grouping of the lovelier Blouses includes the better models of the season's efforts.

Such a sale as this means that the wise woman will always have a number of charming Blouses on hand in a variety of styles and colorings.

Of the many models of interest, three are illustrated.

Trimly tailored and high necked, this Blouse, with its plaiting and tiny buttons, is especially wearable for business and street. Note the turnover collar and novel cuffs. Colors are combination bisque with white.

Georgette crepe in a dressier model has tucked vestee and beautifully beaded front, with a flat tucked collar and a bell sleeve with clusters of tucks.

Crepe de chine is fashioned in this youthful model with round neck and frills with picoté edges that finish the front as well as the long sleeve.

In this group are twenty handsome styles in Georgette crepe, crepe de chine and satin.

Hand embroidered in silk, chenille and beads.

Suit shades, flesh, white and bisque.

$5 Georgette, Crepe de Chine, Tricolette Blouses, $2.95

In this re-grouping of handsome Blouses have been included those with trimmings of lovely laces, bonnaz embroideries, eyelet embroidered in self colors.

Blouses of Tricolette are in two styles, one with fringe finishes and the other with fine embroidery in effective colorings.

All the favored styles are prominent, the round, square and V necks, collars of round and flat shapes, sleeves long and three-quarter with novel finishes and in the wanted colors. Suit shades, white and flesh.

$5.95 to $6.95 Crepe de Chine & Georgette Blouses, $3.95

Filet lace and hand embroidery is the charming finish of many of the models.

Others have hand embroidery in chenille, wool, gray silks and iridescent beads. There are unique styles in collars, the flat shapes that are tucked and the round collars that bear a jaunty frill.

While the sleeves are generally long, there are many of the newer three-quarter styles. Suit shades are included among the flesh and white colors. All sizes, but not in all styles.
